"I shall blame myself," she said, "it was my fault for being out with Kerrith for the afternoon and stayed there late in London and not expected back until much later than I did. When I came in, about half-past nine, she had just before seven, had her dinner, and then went down to the beach of course. I felt worried then. It was from the beach I would have been listening."

she answered me "No. I didn't sit up here talking no sense like she always did." And we done up

Why, Hello, Bethany!

Margaret.

Say! Have you got any of that "New Shit" around?

Mmm...

Be careful with these.
They're real
